Contained Though the real stars of the Wardell-Sagan loft are a duo of stacked shipping containers (see page 144), the couple's open-plan master bathroom is equally bold. The custom vanity was created by Pat Carson from a massive iroko (an African teak) slab with shelves made of woven leather below. A pair of industrially inspired showers by Dutch design star Marcel Wanders completes the space.

"We are most interested in space and light and prefer to shower outdoors whenever possible. We did a study for the skylight above to maximize the amount of direct sunlight hitting the shower, and the river rock creates the feel of being outside."

—Resident and designer Jeff Wardell

Contained Two San Francisco art and travel addicts overhauled a loft—and customized a pair of shipping containers—to accommodate their collection and reflect their passions. In keeping with the industrial aesthetic, the guest suite features a bathroom with exposed plumbing, stripped-down fixtures, and a glass wall that goes from transparent to opaque at the touch of a button.

“Source materials from a local hardwoods supplier and have an artisan construct exactly what you want. But buy the wood with the builder: Grains and cuts are very important.”

—Resident and designer Jeff Wardell
